Qualifications Explained

AS & A Levels

These courses are designed to prepare you for progression to university level study or work in a variety of professions and industries. They test your knowledge and understanding of a subject through examinations and coursework, and also allow you to develop analytical, advanced study and ICT skills. With 25 subjects to choose from, you can continue with subjects you know and enjoy or choose from a range of new options.

In your first year, you will study three or four subjects leading to AS Level qualifications. You could then 'upgrade' your subjects to the full A2 Level qualification in your second year.

You will also study the Welsh Baccalaureate alongside your A Level programme. At Advanced Level, this is worth 120 UCAS points and is the equivalent to an 'A' grade at A Level.

Entry Requirements

A minimum of five GCSEs at Grade C or above, including English Language or Welsh (First Language) and Mathematics, or appropriate equivalent qualifications, normally guarantees entry on to an AS Level course. Details of additional entry requirements can be found in the course summaries.

Vocational Courses

If a more work-related course is what you're looking for, a Vocational course could be for you. These practical courses are available at Levels 2 and 3 and are designed to provide specialist knowledge, understanding and skills to prepare you for a particular field of work or university level study.

BTEC and City & Guilds qualifications are available in a wide range of work-related subjects and you'll be tested through continuous assessment (for example, through course work or practical tasks), so there won't be any traditional final exams. A First Diploma is equivalent to four GCSEs, the National Award is equivalent to one A Level, the National Certificate to two A Levels and the National Diploma is equivalent to three A Levels.

Entry Requirements

A minimum of five GCSEs at Grade C or above is normally required for entry on to a Vocational Level 3 course such as a National Diploma. You would need two GCSE passes to study a Level 2 Vocational course such as a First Diploma or NVQ 2. Details of additional entry requirements can be found in the course summaries.

The Welsh Baccalaureate

The Welsh Baccalaureate is valued by both employers and universities and is designed to develop your personal skills, encourage independence and add real life experience to your studies. At the Rhyf Sixth, you'll combine your chosen studies with the Welsh Baccalaureate at Level 2 or Level 3.

The Welsh Baccalaureate combines traditional qualifications with a Core Award. The Core consists of:

- Wales, Europe & the World, including a language and Individual Investigation
- Personal & Social Education including Community Participation
- Work Related Education including Work Experience and Enterprise
- Essential Skills

Successful completion of the Advanced Diploma will be equivalent to an additional Grade A at A Level and is worth 120 UCAS points for entry to university.
